Music educators and piano teachers have enumerated the many advantages of group piano teaching including the valuable learning atmosphere it fosters. Studies have also found that group instruction is effective in developing both performance and musicianship skills.

Group Lesson Advantages include:

1. Develops confidence in playing for others. - Weekly performance opportunities.
2. Aids students in developing rhythmic security. - Playing together and rhythmic games.
3. Develops concentration by maintaining ones own part while hearing others play. - Ensemble playing.
4. Allows students to broaden their musical experiences. - Improvisation, arranging, composition, ensemble playing.
5. Strengthens family bonds in a friendly encouraging atmosphere. - Younger students learn and experience music with the help of their parents.
6. Fosters an atmosphere that is conducive to the effective teaching of skills such as listening, pitch matching (ear training), singing, rhythm, movement, and music appreciation. - Activities that are fun to experience with others.
7. Facilitates the performance of ensembles leading to the study of voicing and orchestration. - Experiencing the joy of making music together.
8. Establishes a sense of group spirit & group dynamics that increases motivation. - Positive peer pressure.
9. Allows students to learn from peers and parents as well as from teacher. - Parents and students learn to relate to each other.
10. Provides a setting where drills and exercises can be more interesting and motivating. - Challenges students to keep improving and try harder.
11. Increases attention span, allowing the lesson time to be longer than private lessons. - Varied activities and learning experiences (multi-sensory learning).
